IN this Compendium of Nosology, I have, as far as possible, confined myself to the system and the genera of my venerable master Dr. Cullen, whose memory and justly acquired reputation will be ever dear to those who studied in his school, and were honoured with his friendship. Of all the systems which have yet appeared, his for a practitioner is undoubtedly the best: yet in some few instances I have departed from him; but it has been chiefly where he hesitates himself.

My reasons for these variations, as requiring disquisitions ill suited to a Compendium, I must here omit.

The utility of classical distinctions is almost universally acknowledged; yet nothing is more difficult than to make such an arrangement as shall meet with universal approbation. It will, however, be acknowledged sufficient for every useful purpose, if we can with precision ascertain the name and nature of a disease, although we should not perfectly agree as to its proper place in a system of Nosology. Having once formed his diagnosis, the skilful practitioner will next proceed to investigate, where it is possible, the proximate cause of the disease; and where that is not to be discovered, he will pay particular attention both to the occasional and to the predisposing cause. In all these investigations the younger students will, I trust, receive some assistance from the Compendium now presented to the public; and with a moderate share of penetration will be enabled, in most cases, to determine what are the most judicious indications to effect a cure.

For the Compendium of Therapeutics I have been indebted principally to Drs. Duncan, Whytte, Cullen, Elliot, Berkenhout; and for some of the most efficacious formula, I must acknowledge my obligation to Dr. NANKIVELL, whose fame is too well established in our metropolis to need any eulogium from my pen.

Should this little work meet with acceptance among either the students in our hospitals, or the medical practitioners in country villages, I shall think myself well rewarded for my trouble.

These factitious airs promise, under the skilful management of Dr. BEDDOES at the Hot Wells, Bristol, and Dr. THORNTON in London, to be a remedy well worthy the attention of the medical practitioner.

The oxygene air, in a properly diluted state, is a stimulus the most natural and diffusive. It promotes the insensible perspiration, greatly aids digestion, favours sleep, exhilarates the spirits, and relieves difficult respiration. It is found of the highest use in the low nervous fever. The azotic air abates inflammation, and is the only remedy with the hydrogene air that is found capable of arresting the progress of consumption; and the carbonic acid air is a most powerful antiseptic.
